Limeworks specialises in the finishing of concrete floors for commercial and residential properties. Using the latest world-class HTC machinery, the company can prepare and finish a variety of decorative residential and fit-for-purpose commercial polished concrete floors. Here, Limeworks produced the floor with a high dose of 9mm dolerite aggregate in a charcoal pigment. The company prides itself on providing high-quality workmanship, ensuring meticulous care is given when placing the concrete to ensure an even distribution of aggregate throughout the floor. The floor is then finished using the HTC Superfloor process, which involves seven stages of diamond grinding and polishing, a pin-hole remedy process and floor densifying. Lastly, the floor is burnished, sealed and handed over to the customer.

Capturing its owners' collective love for nature and the outdoors, this coastal home offers its family a true South African lifestyle.

With its blissful environment, a coastal estate in Sheffield Beach was the chosen location.

"Our property is situated on the west boundary of the estate in a short cul-de-sac. There's a concrete and stone road leading up to our home, and it's lined with large green coral, mango and avocado trees, which evoke a sense of calm as you drive in. We loved this site the moment we saw it!"

With a goal to create the most comfortable and family-friendly environment, the owners worked with an architect to materialise their four-bedroom dream home and, most importantly, maximise on the property.

"Privacy was a priority, so the architect managed to eliminate the impact of future builds on the two neighbouring sites, and oriented the house in such a way that you would never see another house from the living areas – only the forest," says the owner.

Using the natural contours of the land, the architect strategically placed all the service garages and wine cellar on the arrival level and dedicated the main platform level to living spaces.

"Our main bedroom is lightly raised with a cantilever slab and >
